

OUR JUNIOR OFFICE BOY

n. y.—mr willum everly who lives over in hoboken wishes his youngest son wasnt so blamed brite and quick to spill his talk

& mrs everly which is mr everly's 2d wife thinks so too becaus she certainly got away to a bad start on the wedding day & i'd bet the seat of my pants that tobias everly is in for a bunch of good wallops from his step ma if he dont wach out

mr everly's 1st wife has been dead a long time & he thought it was about time to give his kids another ma, & get a wife to keep hisself from being so lonesome

all last summer & fall he was coming over to see a dame that lived in the bronix & finnally they hitched up in dubbel harness

now dear, mr everly said to his 2d wife, who was a old made befour she was married to him, we will now go over to our nest in hoboken & you will see my lovely children & i know you will like them, they are that brite and smart

all rite, honey bunch, the 2d mrs. everly chirped, we will go for i am ankshious to take the little motherless children in my arms

so they went home

the kids all flocked into the parlor when there new ma kicked in & they gave her the onct over my dear children, there pa said, this is the new mother i brought for you susie gave her new ma her mitt & a smack on the kisser, but tobias woodent come neer, he just stood on the other side of the room getting a good eyefull

now tobias, his dad said, don't you like your new ma

o, i gess i like her all rite, tobias ansered, but pa, you sure did get stung, for she aint new at all

TODAY'S BELLRINGER

"It says here that there are over 800 ways of cooking potatoes," said Janes, looking at his wife.

"Yes?" answered Mrs. Jones.

"Well, my dear, why don't you learn one of them?" added Mr. J.

SURE

"Robinson Crusoe was an acrobat!"

"He wasn't."

"Sure he was. It says in my book: 'Robinson Crusoe finished his day's work an' sat on his chest.'"

Gabird Gab

The seat of war is the place where the standing army sits down.